

A b s t r a c t

The present invention relates to a method for examining the activity of ion channels, comprising the following steps:

- providing a sample comprising ion channels; and
- 5 - determining a value of a measuring parameter as an indicator of the activity of the ion channels;

characterized in that said determining of the value of the measuring parameter is performed at a temperature of \leq about 10 °C.